INTRODUCTION

COMING TO TERMS WITH TYPE

- Serif: fonts that have “serifs” or feet at the base of letters and at the end of strokes.
- Sans Serif: fonts without serifs.
- Ascender: letters like b, d, h, k, l and t where part of the letter ascends above the rest.
- Descender: letters like g, p and y where part of the letter descends below the rest.
- Leading: the space between lines of type.
- Point Size: how type is measured; one point equals 1/72 of an inch, so 72 point type would be about one inch or 12 picas high.
- Baseline: the imaginary line upon which most letters “sit” and below which descenders extend.
- Midline (or Mean Line): the imaginary line which determines the height of lowercase letters and above which ascenders extend.
- X-height: the distance between the baseline and the midline.

Herff Jones Fonts® is a collection of more than 250 PostScript® Type 1 fonts and 90 OpenType fonts developed for yearbook use. You do not have to send fonts to the plant if you use any of the Herff Jones fonts or any Adobe typefaces that you own. This collection will enable you to make appropriate design decisions for body copy, captions, headlines, folios, score boxes, tables, ads, book titles and theme statements.

You'll find fonts representing every typographic style, including old style, transitional, modern, serif, sans serif, decorative, novelty and script typefaces. You'll also find small cap fonts.

PLANNING FOR TYPEFACE USE

Text (or body/caption) fonts

These fonts are legible in small sizes, usually 8-14 points. Serif fonts are usually easier to read in long blocks of text, but sans serif fonts may also be used. Examples of serif fonts are AHJ Bodoni, AHJ Garamond and AHJ Times. Some sans serif fonts are AHJ Antique Olive, AHJ Chantilly and AHJ Unitus.

Display (or headline) fonts

These fonts are used at larger point sizes for headlines and logos or for drawing attention with a small amount of text. They are not very legible at smaller point sizes. AHJ CHRISMA, AHJ Caper and AHJ Vocal are some examples of display or headline fonts. As you can see from the sample below, a font that is difficult to read at a smaller size may be very legible at a larger size.

AHJ Caper set at 18 point

Script fonts

Script fonts are easier to read when used at larger sizes and should not be set in all capitals. Examples of script fonts are AHJ Cassidy, AHJ Mistral and AHJ Teresita Script.

AHJ Mistral set at 18 point

Outline fonts

These decorative fonts should be used at larger point sizes, without adding italic or bold styling. Examples of outline fonts are AHJ CAMPBELL, AHJ DELANEY and AHJ ERBAR DECO.

AHJ ERBAR DECO SET AT 18 POINT

HEADLINES 101

Attention-getting headline packages can be created using one font:

Designing
with
Type

A rather elegant serif such as English Serif has a more formal look, especially when main words are capitalized.

designing
with
type

Play with size, weight, capitalization and alignment until you get the look you're trying to achieve.

designing
with
type

Just making the same headline all lower case gives it a different personality.

Designing Type with

Changing the arrangement of elements and the weight of the main word creates another look.

Two contrasting fonts can also create dynamic headlines:

TWO
may work better than
ONE

Combining the serif Clearface, which has a little personality, with the plain look of CartoGothic can provide a lot of variations.

TWO MAY WORK BETTER THAN
ONE

Just reversing the use gives the headline package a different personality.

two
one

Again, play with alignment, capitalization, size and weight. With two fonts, you have a lot more options.

TWO may work better than
ONE

Think about which word you want to emphasize, then give it attention through size, weight or both.

Playing toward the basket, freshman Carter Papp makes a layup that most people in the basketball gym would call "a layup." "We were going in for it but we were both in mid-air and I got to the basket and we," Papp says.

Reaching for a loose ball, junior Marcus Williams jumps to get the rebound. "I was really trying to get it but I was out of sync and I was getting over my head," Williams says. "The game was really fun because we were really close and we were going to be a good team."

Uselessly passing the ball, junior Samantha Nord tries to find an open teammate instead of taking the shot herself. "The game against Papp was really fun because the team worked together," Samantha said. "We worked really hard, but I guess that's what teamwork is." Photo by K. Dunbar

Playing hard leads to injury for freshman

She reached for the basketball—only the tips of her fingers making it before it rebounded toward the other end of the court. Freshman Ashlyn Pyhiski immediately started a lie. As she neared the ball, a player from the opposing team caused her to trip, hitting the ground first with the other girl falling on top of her.

"I don't remember what happened," Ashlyn said. "I felt the ground, and I was out of it. They say it didn't look me out, but I don't remember anything from it. I felt my head and there was this huge knot, it was out of this world."

The police, her mother and the coaches from both teams immediately ran onto the court. After they checked to make sure she wasn't severely hurt, they carried her off the court to some benches until they could get her to the doctor.

"Mom took me to the hospital, and we waited in the emergency room for four and half hours," Ashlyn said. "When we left it was about midnight. We went to Health Care Express for x-rays and cat scans."

The news from the doctor wasn't so good. Ashlyn found out that she had received a concussion. "I was out for two weeks, and I couldn't play in the games," she said. "During practice it hurt when I ran or did anything."

After it happened, Ashlyn's dream of receiving another head injury only increased.

"I'm always afraid it will happen again because I've had two concussions before the one," she said. "I was afraid that another one, I would be able to pass the physical. If you get too many head injuries, you can't play."

Looking back, Ashlyn realized that her aggressive behavior on the basketball court may have contributed to her accumulation of head injuries.

"Everybody says I play basketball like a linebacker, so I guess that's why," she said. "I like to be aggressive and I'm just competitive. My teammates make jokes about how aggressive I am. They wish I would be a little bit more casual."

Despite the injuries, Ashlyn's love of basketball never faded. "I never want to quit playing basketball."

The main reason I wear my mouth guard is to protect my teeth during the games. I really don't want to knock any of my teeth loose. Plenty of things could happen during the game where your face could get hit by the ball—it's just the sport of basketball. Someone could be passing the ball and I step in front them and get hit. A fumbled rebound, or loose ball could do the trick, too. A lot of people give me a hard time about wearing the guard, but I just tell them I'd rather wear it than get my teeth knocked out."

TYPE THAT WORKS

Texas High School
The Tiger, Texarkana, TX

- The spread combines a serif font with a sans serif. The serif is used sparingly as a contrasting display type, both in size and in color. The main word head is in the serif font and the rest of the headline is the sans serif font.
- The designer uses the same serif font — and in the same color — for the large initial letter that acts as a reader entry point on the copy.
- The sans serif font in a bold weight was used for the secondary headline, the secondary package quote and the caption lead ins.
- Notice how all the copy and captions are set in the sans serif font and they are not justified. This gives the design a more casual, contemporary look, more like a magazine. Serifs and justified type give designs a more formal, traditional look.
- Look how the designer echoed the style of the primary headline for the secondary quote package. It uses the same combination of serif and sans serif plus the same colors as the main headline. But it's smaller, signaling to the reader that it is less important than the main headline/copy package.

Dress: $6.99. Turtleneck: $7.99. On a Sunday afternoon, two girls shuffle through the racks of Ross, looking for affordable but also fashionable clothes. Inspired by the show, 'Look for Less', they tried to find an expensive runway look at a cheap price.

Light bulbs brighten the runway as models wear the fall fashions down the catwalk. The buyers on the side were writing to pay thousands of dollars for an outfit, but there was no reason to spend so much money when the same look was available at discount stores. Yearbook challenged junior Crystal Quach and senior Keshia Shi to copy the fall looks at a more reasonable price.

The girls faced the daunting task of rummaging through the clothing-filled racks of the local bargain store, Ross.

for the perfect look. Crystal and Keshia received pictures of the outfits they would be copying and then they were turned loose in the store to begin their search. Keshia headed to the front desks and immediately focused on looking for black pants and baggy turt. Meanwhile, on the other side of the store, Crystal knew exactly what she wanted, but it was difficult to find clothes that fit her waist. "It's hard to find my size," she said. "The store doesn't have a lot of choices." Luckily, she was able to find two outfits that matched her runway look. She laid both of them on and after some consideration, decided on the dress and turtleneck.

At the end of thirty minutes, both girls emerged from the dressing rooms. Yearbook challenged junior Crystal Quach and senior Keshia Shi to copy the fall looks at a more reasonable price. "I think it was pretty close to the picture," said Keshia. "To me, it was an interesting experience." This proved that sometimes the runway look can be copied at a reasonable price. Nobody would ever know the difference between a designer top and an imitation.

1. Senior Keshia Shi browses through items at Ross to find the perfect look to copy. She will be writing her most detailed to the runway look.

2. Looking through racks of pants to match her desired look, Keshia Shi made some selections that were comfortable.

3. Junior Crystal Quach was for the best fit that matched the style. There was a large selection of items for her to choose from.

Keshia copied the sophisticated look of a chic suit. She found a black, fitted jacket, black skinny jeans and a baggy white shirt. She also took a strap from a different jacket and tied it around her waist.

Crystal imitated her runway look by using simple elements. Her outfit consisted of a maroon dress on top of a simple turtleneck and black leggings. It may not have been exactly the same, but it closely resembled the look.

LOOK AN UNWRITTEN SIGNATURE

Some people have a certain dress that they incorporate into their everyday style. Seniors Rita Tam and Christine Chan explain their own personal signatures.

Christine Chan: "Clothes with stars are cute and fun. Instead of being drab and boring, it's more lively and cheerful. I have star cell phone charms, they are drawn on my back, and I have a lot of star necklaces and earrings."

Rita Tam: "I have a habit with the crown buckle on it and people tend to love my crown necklaces. Whenever I see a crown in a store, I check it out before I purchase it so that it matches with my clothes."

DISCOVER HAIRDOS AND DON'TS

From having her hair in a ponytail to parting her bangs to one side, junior Tiffany Yu changed her hairstyle every single day. "Sometimes I put my hair up. Sometimes I leave it down," Tiffany said. "The hairstyle I use when it's up is a bun." Her various hairstyles started last summer when she decided to rest time for a change. "Used to leave my hair any style," she said. "I got tired of the same old hairstyles." These days, she has added handbands to her hair. "I changed my hair bands too. I like metallic ones with bows." Handbands make it better and give it the finishing touches. Whether it was up or down, Tiffany's hair gave her a unique style, not the same repetitive.

- This spread is a good example of a unified look through the use of one font. Everything is set in the same sans serif font. The designer uses color, capitalization and italic type to give the spread variety.
- Check out how the designer created a similar look for the primary headline package and for the two secondary packages by using the same capitalization pattern and the same colors. Using all capitals means not having to worry about working around ascenders and descenders. The use of this thin sans serif keeps the all-capitals pattern from being too overpowering.
- Look at how the spacing of the display type also gives the packages a unified design. In each of the headline packages, there is little or no leading and the words are arranged without spaces. Color becomes the way the readers can distinguish between words.
- This spread is also a good example of visual hierarchy. The most important headline, the one packaged with the main copy, is the largest. The second most important, LOOK (in the lower left corner), is smaller and echoes the primary headline visually and verbally. The HOW DO I LOOK package is smaller still, so it's even less important. The least important, DISCOVER, is the smallest headline and, because the main word is a gray screen, it emphasizes its place at the bottom of the hierarchy. Again it echoes the primary headline both visually and verbally.
- The secondary headline is extended to provide a clear, lengthy overview of the story. It's set off from the copy by alignment, plus it's a larger point size, a heavier weight and italicized.
- It's easy to distinguish the captions for the main photos from the secondary HOW DO I LOOK package because the main captions have more leading.
